

JACK HYDE MEMORIAL TOURNEY THIS WEEK AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

Maine Players Will Honor the Memory of One of Maine's Thoroughbred Sportsmen

By BOB LEVIN

The third annual "Jack Hyde" Memorial golf tournament will draw golfers from all over the State to the Bath Country club Saturday and Sunday. This wartime tournament, one of the three Memorials played this year, probably will go undefended, as last year's winner, Jim Browning, then of the Norway Country club, is in the Army. Browning turned in a winning score of 69, one under par and equal to the course record.

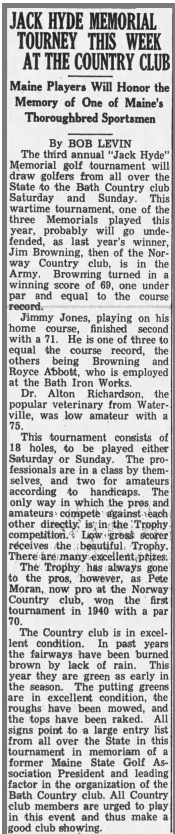

Jimmy Jones, playing on his home course, finished second with a 71. He is one of three to equal the course record, the others being Browning and Royce Abbott, who is employed at the Bath Iron Works.

Dr. Alton Richardson, the popular veterinary from Waterville, was low amateur with a 75.

This tournament consists of 18 holes, to be played either Saturday or Sunday. The professionals are in a class by themselves, and two for amateurs according to handicaps. The only way in which the pros and amateurs compete against each other directly is in the Trophy competition. Low gross scorer receives the beautiful Trophy. There are many excellent prizes.

The Trophy has always gone to the pros, however, as Pete Moran, now pro at the Norway Country club, won the first tournament in 1940 with a par 70.

The Country club is in excellent condition. In past years the fairways have been burned brown by lack of rain. This year they are green as early in the season. The putting greens are in excellent condition, the roughs have been mowed, and the tops have been raked. All signs point to a large entry list from all over the State in this tournament in memoriam of a former Maine State Golf Association President and leading factor in the organization of the Bath Country club. All Country club members are urged to play in this event and thus make a good club showing.
